Combined questionnaire of the survey of the population at addresses with residential establishments/collective living quarters and of the sample-based household survey

Reference date: 9 May 2011

Purpose of the survey

This questionnaire is used for two legally independent surveys. The first one is the "survey of the population at addresses with residential establishments/collective living quarters", for which data are collected to determine the persons living at an address and to serve as a basis for intercensal population updates, the purpose being the determination of the official number of inhabitants. The second one is the "sample-based household survey" which, in the combined survey, is used to cover census variables which cannot be obtained from administrative registers. As you live at an address with a residential establishment/collective living quarters and, at the same time, have been selected for participation in the household survey in accordance with Article 7 of the 2011 Census Act, please complete this combined questionnaire. For the survey conducted at residential establishments/collective living quarters in accordance with Article 8 of the 2011 Census Act, questions 1 to 11 are asked. Those questions are in part also used for the sample-based household survey (for details see the explanations given in the legal information). Questions 12 to 50 refer only to the sample-based household survey. There is an obligation to provide information, with the exception of question 15. Answering question 15 is voluntary.

For persons living at addresses with residential establishments/collective living quarters (special facilities) and, at the same time, have been selected for participation in the sample-based household survey (household sample survey), a combined questionnaire has been developed. It covers the (auxiliary and survey) variables of both surveys. Although part of the personal data are needed for both surveys, they are collected only once to reduce the burden on respondents.

The following variables are collected simultaneously for the survey conducted at addresses with residential establishments/collective living quarters and for the household sample survey:

- Family name and first names (question 1),
- sex (question 2),
- day, month and year of birth (question 3),
- citizenships (question 6),
- marital status (question 7), and
- housing status (questions 10 and 11).

The following variables are only used for the “survey conducted at special-facility addresses”:

- Former names (question 1),
- country of birth (question 4),
- place of birth (question 5),
- the question of whether the respondent lives at the address in a household according to Article 2, para. 1, sentences 4 to 6 of the 2011 Census Act (question 8), and
- day of moving into the dwelling or facility (question 9).

All other variables (questions 12 to 50) are collected only for the “household sample survey”.

1. Legal information on the survey of the population at addresses with residential establishments/collective living quarters (special facilities)

Purpose, type and scope of the survey, legal bases

Through the written survey conducted among all persons living at special-facility addresses, data are collected whose purpose is to determine the persons living at an address and to serve as a basis for intercensal population updates. The survey is conducted as a complete enumeration of all persons living at special-facility addresses.

Pursuant to Article 2, para. 5 of the 2011 Census Act, special facilities are collective and institutional living quarters, emergency shelters, residential establishments and similar living quarters. Collective and institutional living quarters are facilities which are generally used for long-term accommodation and care of persons with specific accommodation needs.

The reference date of the survey is 9 May 2011.

The survey is conducted on the basis of the 2011 Census Act of 8 July 2009 (Federal Law Gazette I, p. 1781) in conjunction with the Federal Statistics Law of 22 January 1987 (Federal Law Gazette I, pp. 462, 565), last amended by Article 3 of the Law of 7 September 2007 (Federal Law Gazette I, p. 2246). Data are collected in accordance with Article 8, para. 1 of the 2011 Census Act.

The survey involves an obligation to provide information.

The obligation to provide information is laid down in Article 18, para. 5 of the 2011 Census Act in conjunction with Article 15, para. 1 of the Federal Statistics Law. Pursuant to those provisions, all persons living in the special facility at the address concerned are obliged to provide information also on their own minor children living at the same address.

For persons of the age of majority who cannot provide the information themselves and for minors, the obligation to provide information applies to the facility management instead. The management's obligation to provide information applies only to data known to them. Where the facility management is obliged to provide information, the persons on whom information is to be provided must be informed accordingly.

Pursuant to Article 15, para. 6 of the Federal Statistics Law, objections and actions for rescission brought against the summons to provide information will not have a suspensive effect.

Rights and duties of the interviewers, way of providing information

Interviewers are employed for the surveys. Upon request, the persons responsible for providing information who have actually been met must provide the interviewers orally with the information on the auxiliary variables of family name, former names, first names and day of birth (day without month and without year) and on the survey variables of month and year of birth as well as sex also for other persons living in the same dwelling. The interviewers may enter those data themselves into the survey documents. This also applies to other information to be entered into the survey documents to the extent that the respondents agree.

The remaining information may be provided orally to the interviewer, in writing or electronically. Where the information is provided in writing, the completed questionnaires should be given to the interviewer, either directly or in a sealed envelope, or be delivered to the survey office or be sent there. Where the information is provided electronically, the data should be provided through the online procedure made available to the respondents.

The interviewers must show their identification and have specially been sworn to secrecy. They must not use the information obtained from their activity in other procedures or for other purposes. This obligation will continue to apply after they have ended their activity as interviewers.

Auxiliary variables, separation and deletion

The family name, former names, first names, day of birth (day without month and without year) and place of birth are auxiliary variables and are used only for the technical conduct of the survey. They will be separated from the survey variables at the earliest possible time, stored separately and deleted as soon as the statistical offices have finished checking the survey variables and auxiliary variables for consistency and completeness, but not later than four years after 9 May 2011.

The survey documents will be destroyed after census processing has been finished, but not later than four years after 9 May 2011.

2. Legal information on the sample-based household survey (household sample survey)

Purpose, type and scope of the survey, legal bases

The purpose of the household sample survey is to assure the data quality and to collect additional data on the population. The survey is conducted as a sample survey among persons living at addresses with housing space. The sample size is about 9.6% of the population.

The reference date of the survey is 9 May 2011.

The survey is conducted on the basis of the 2011 Census Act of 8 July 2009 (Federal Law Gazette I, p. 1781) in conjunction with the Federal Statistics Law of 22 January 1987 (Federal Law Gazette I, pp. 462, 565), last amended by Article 3 of the Law of 7 September 2007 (Federal Law Gazette I, p. 2246).

Data are collected in accordance with Article 7, paras. 4 and 5 of the 2011 Census Act.

The survey involves an obligation to provide information, with the exception of question 15.

The obligation to provide information is laid down in Article 18, para. 3 of the 2011 Census Act in conjunction with Article 15, para. 1 of the Federal Statistics Law. Pursuant to those provisions, all persons of the age of majority, or minors keeping a household of their own, are also obliged to provide information on minor household members living at the selected addresses.

For household members of the age of majority who cannot provide the information themselves, any other household member obliged to provide information is obliged to provide that information. The obligation to provide information on minors or persons who cannot provide the information themselves applies only to data known to the person obliged to provide information.

Pursuant to Article 15, para. 6 of the Federal Statistics Law, objections and actions for rescission brought against the summons to provide information will not have a suspensive effect.

Rights and duties of the interviewers, way of providing information

Interviewers are employed for the surveys. Upon request, the persons responsible to provide information who have actually been met must provide the interviewers orally with the information on the auxiliary variables of family name and first names, address and location of the dwelling in the building, day of birth (day without month and without year) and on the survey variables of gender, month and year of birth as well as number of persons in the household also for other persons living in the same dwelling. The interviewers may enter those data themselves into the survey documents. This also applies to other information to be entered into the survey documents to the extent that the respondents agree. The remaining information may be provided orally to the interviewer, in writing or electronically. Where the information is provided in writing, the completed questionnaires should be given to the interviewer, either directly or in a sealed envelope or be delivered to the survey office or be sent there within the deadline specified. Where the information is provided electronically, the data should be provided through the procedure made available to the respondents.

The interviewers must show their identification and have specially been sworn to secrecy. They must not use the information obtained from their activity in other procedures or for other purposes. This obligation will continue to apply after they have ended their activity as interviewers.

Auxiliary variables, separation and deletion

The family name, first names, address and location of the dwelling in the building, day of birth (day without month and without year), telecommunication numbers of the persons obliged to provide information or of another person available for queries and the main status in the week of the reference date for persons in the labour force are auxiliary variables and are used only for the technical conduct of the survey. They will be separated from the survey variables at the earliest possible time, stored separately and deleted as soon as the statistical offices have finished checking the survey variables and auxiliary variables for consistency and completeness, but not later than four years after 9 May 2011. The survey documents will be destroyed after census processing has been finished, but not later than four years after 9 May 2011.

3. The following provisions apply both to the survey of the population at addresses with residential establishments/collective living quarters and to the sample-based household survey (household sample survey)

Statistical confidentiality

In accordance with Article 16 of the Federal Statistics Law, the data collected are kept secret. Only in exceptional cases explicitly provided for by law may individual data be passed on.

For transmission to the legislative bodies and for planning purposes, but not for the handling of individual cases, tables containing statistical results – even where table cells contain only one case – may be transmitted by the statistical offices of the Federation and the States to Supreme Federal or State authorities in accordance with Article 22, para. 1 of the 2011 Census Act.

Under Article 22, para. 2 of the 2011 Census Act, the statistical offices of the Federation and the States may, exclusively for purposes of municipal statistics, transmit individual data on the survey variables and on the auxiliary variables of “street” and “house number” or individual data grouped by block sides to the municipal statistical units for their sphere of competence. However, such transmission is permitted only if statistical confidentiality is ensured by legally required measures, especially with regard to separating the statistical units in terms of space, organisation and staff from those units of the municipalities and associations of municipalities that are responsible for non-statistical tasks. The auxiliary variables must be deleted there at the earliest possible time, but not later than two years after transmission. This means that the data must not be transmitted to the administration for administrative purposes. That prohibition to transfer the data back means, for example, that the population registers must not be corrected by means of the data collected by the Census.

Pursuant to Article 16, para. 6 of the Federal Statistics Law, only effectively anonymised individual data may be made available to institutions of higher education or other institutions entrusted with independent scientific research for the purpose of carrying out scientific projects.

The obligation to keep data secret applies to persons who have received individual data in accordance with the above provisions to the same extent as to staff members of the statistical offices.

Reference numbers

The bar codes printed on the questionnaire serve purposes of machine readability and electronic processing of the data.

The bar code printed on the upper right-hand side represents the questionnaire number. The questionnaire number contains a sequence of random digits and allows allocating the questionnaire to the person concerned. It also includes a check digit. However, it does not contain any information on the relevant person.

The activation code is a sequence of random characters which, together with the questionnaire number, is used to identify the respondents if they participate in the online survey.

The bar code printed on the bottom of the questionnaire represents the document code shown directly above (sequence of 38 digits). The document code is a reference number used only for organising the survey and the processing procedure. It contains the questionnaire number, the information that this is a questionnaire of the survey of the population at addresses with residential establishments/collective living quarters or of the sample-based household survey as part of the 2011 Census referring to the reference date of 9 May 2011, and indicates which Federal State is responsible.
